The application is capable of displaying Swatch Internet Time by the system tray, and it does so successfully using a neat technique. Furthermore, the app is responsive and portable, and you don't have to run the application with administrative privileges. What's more, you are not allowed to set alarms, change the look of the clock, or work with an integrated calendar, so you may want to avoid using the application if you are in the mood for exploring other alternatives. Intelopard is a Windows Live Essentials add-on that allows users to access Bing and other Internet services without running a browser. It also offers a clean and speedy Windows Start menu. Features Let's start with its most prominent feature: Windows Live Essentials. This tool installs all the components you need to access Microsoft's online services, including Windows Live Messenger, Calendar and People. However, the installation process requires you to perform a profile change, which makes the tool run in the background. The good news is that Intelopard does not create any additional files or registry keys. When you first launch Intelopard, you will be asked to create an account. You can use your Windows Live account, your Hotmail or Live.com account or simply use a new Windows Live account. The registration process only lasts a couple of minutes. The next thing you'll notice on the left-hand side of the screen is the Start menu, which contains options for accessing online services in a clean and easy-to-use manner. Meanwhile, the taskbar's browser option allows users to launch a browser using the Start menu. You can also use the interface to hide or 09e8f5149f
