Medical student satisfaction with the medical school elective. To describe the medical student elective and its influence on student satisfaction. We invited all medical students (5th to 8th year) from all six undergraduate medical schools in Sweden to complete a questionnaire. The quantitative and qualitative response was compiled and presented at the national poster presentation of the Association of Medical Schools of Europe. The response rate to the questionnaire was 87% (n=171). Almost all of the students agreed that the elective was a valuable part of their education, even though it was perceived to be time consuming and challenging. Most of the students felt that the elective made an impact on their future life as a physician. According to the students' opinion, the elective could be improved by removing the time restrictions in the examination on the third clinical rotation, by reducing the students' load of other responsibilities, by reducing the stress to a minimum, by making the exam a more fair and objective method, by increasing the number of mentors, and by increasing the reward and recognition of the students. The medical student elective is a valued educational program, even though it is considered to be a strenuous and challenging activity. Most of the students feel that it has a positive impact on their future. It could be improved by reducing the time restriction to the end of the third clinical rotations and by providing more time for other demanding medical activities.Q: How to Get Child Entities for a Parent Entity in Breezejs I have an Entity called Page.
