See Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 395 (1989). The Graham Court also indicated that the right of an individual to be free from arbitrary and lawless application of force by the police, -25- however, is broader than the substantive due process right already recognized in Graham, recognizing that protection of the individual against the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government was a more fundamental aim of the Fourteenth Amendment than the probable cause requirement of a warrant or description. See id., at 395-396. See also Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327, 331 (1986) (a Fourteenth Amendment claim for false arrest derives from the Fourth Amendment's protection from unreasonable seizures). Graham, 490 U.S. at 396 n.10. III. Malley has alleged, inter alia, an arbitrary and unreasonable seizure. Appellant contends that the circuit court exceeded its authority by changing the verdict from no cause of action to negligence. The argument is without merit. Appellant did not file a cross-appeal, and thus an issue was not decided and cannot be argued on appeal. Finally, appellant argues that the circuit court should have sanctioned defense counsel for misconduct during closing argument because counsel was allowed to cross-examine WF, appellant's treating physician, and make irrelevant statements which were prejudicial. "Counsel must confine themselves to the issues in the case." City of Richmond v. Hensley, 220 Va. 673, 676, 260 S.E.2d 251, 253 (1979). Therefore, the jury is entitled to draw its own inferences from the evidence and arguments of counsel. Zirkle v. Graham, 188 Va. 774, 781-82, 51 S.E.2d 146, 150 (1949). The circuit court has a duty to decide whether improper questions and comments have been made. In doing so, the circuit court must carefully scrutinize the record and, if improper questions or argument are made, the court must strike them from the record and instruct the jury to disregard them.
