Astoundingly, this game was actually composed and performed by myself (Logan Gabriel), a self-taught jazz musician from the UK. I could call upon my musical skills to create a fitting soundtrack for the game, but I felt that would mean creating a context that would be independent of the enjoyment I had with the game, so instead I have simply offered an arrangement of the game's music for space, allowing those who are interested in the game a chance to hear the music better. This soundtrack is an instrument of self-expression, a blend of style and purpose, and the best of the improvisation of jazz and ethnic music. The game soundtrack was originally released on iTunes in December of 2015.

FEATURES An important part of the game's narrative is that it is made for space exploration enthusiasts, and as a jazz composer, I feel it was important to provide a title that would satisfy a jazz audience. My intentions here were to add a more accessible variation to jazz, along with space.

Space is a great setting for jazz; while the common definition of jazz is improvised music, there are elements of jazz that are woven into the fabric of space exploration. The Mars Odyssey mission, as well as other space missions and probes, have documented the effects of the radiation on the human body, and how certain elements of jazz have found themselves in the space industry. With this soundtrack, I hope to provide an environment in which both musicians and non-musicians can easily navigate, without the need to understand the formal elements of music theory. The music of the game has a structured, and oftentimes improvised, form, and provides a sense of rhythm. THE GAME: SPACEPLAN is a Flash version of a complex game, originally designed for a physical format. It is the story of a space exploration group, comprising of different elements of life in space. The game revolves around space simulation, and the usage of a modified form of the Beagle Board, a UK computer, in order to carry out a Mars expedition. The game also uses a score generator to create a musical environment, using elements of jazz to simulate a manned mission in space. The development of the game has been a long journey, and a challenge in and of itself. It has been a significant step towards my education as a developer, as it has taken me to a new and exciting stage in my life. I played the final version of the game, and

Are you a Spell-Caster? You know that feeling when a coin accidentally falls from your pocket? Your eager mind is running and running to catch that coin, but it slips through your fingers and lands in another pocket? Do you get a type of thrill when solving a physics based puzzle? Then surely you'll love Wizardry Squared. In Wizardry Squared, you wield the magic of the Great Grimoire. When cast, the great Grimoire allows you to shape the physical elements of the environment around you. When you've mastered this spell, you're ready for some friendly, 1st-person platforming wizardry with your distinct spell-crafting interface! A Spell you Have to Cast: By collecting spell cores you will enhance your magic power to perform different types of spells. With a high level of magic, you'll find yourself facing more challenging enemies, and even more tempting loot! There are ten types of spells, but by collecting more spell cores of that specific type, you can unlock more powerful magic with great bonuses that will help you on your path. The more you collect, the more spells you can learn, making all the challenges much easier! "Best Spell-Casting Experience" After reaching Level 10, you can use a special spell called "Spellbeast". While casting this spell you'll be able to fight more powerful enemies and some new enemies. Each spell has a unique power that can be increased by collecting spell cores of the same type. This power increases your chances to collect loot, attack damage and save your life. Are you tired of the repetitive shooting and platforming? Wizardry Squared has a new looting system. You won't find any of the old "Stats to Inventory" or "Stats to Item Store" methods. A new Loot system is introduced to Wizardry Squared; All of your collected loot will become available to you by using a new "Loot" method. You can use your Loot method to get your desired items that you want. When you open a chest, you can loot just a potion, a weapon, an armor or a consumable item. You can open a chest anywhere, so don't worry! Aptitude of Spell-Casting You'll need to enhance your attributes, such as Intelligence, Dexterity, and Magic Power so that you can cast better spells! As the game progresses, you'll find yourself facing new enemies in the harder levels. There are two forms of magic power in the game:

's Blog Asteria's Blog How to Survive in the Postgradhood? Tips & Troubleshooting 8/26/2014 17:23 Last post talking about how do freelancers survive in a regular job and how to make money with Freelancer.Phon. After thinking for some time now I got to the realization that a regular job isn't for me. So here it comes. I will present you with a list of tips and tricks how freelancers are able to survive in a postgraduate employment, but also how to make money with Freelancer.Phon. Be self-employed? If you are a postgraduate and want to be self-employed in addition to your regular full time job you will face a lot of challenges. First and most important thing is to find a niche if you are a freelancer. There is almost nothing worse than a random item or useless thing that you do because you have no purpose for doing it. For example, if you are a web designer, make your niche to be graphic design but don't just stop at that. Choose from the list of free Photoshop courses from Deviant art or graphicsmagazine's articles. Just find topics that you will never stop to learn and explore and make yourself competitive in your field. Find clients As I have mentioned before, you need some skills from freelancing, which you will learn in your studies. Finding clients is a bit more complicated than in the world of freelance but not hard at all. Almost every postgraduate should have a bank account or personal savings account where your clients have the right to pay for your hard work. Another point on the survival of a freelancer is to find clients that will wait until you have delivered the job. People are terrible about payment as a part of their business culture but you have to understand that they are way, way more money than you give them, because the time they are waiting is the whole lifetime of you and your work. If they pay on the daily basis they will never be happier than any one else, especially if they need you in certain hours. Spots on forums This is the easiest way to find clients but a nice way to kill your free time. To be honest, I have made a habit that I use to look for any job I
