IT IS TIME TO GO! An attempt to identify the whole body filter load for chronic lead toxicosis. To better understand the reasons for lead toxicity, the whole body lead burden of a reference population of 216 adults and children was determined by a combination of direct and indirect sampling techniques. The whole body burden of lead varied from nondetectable to 879 micrograms/kg. In contrast to adults, the body burden of children was not influenced by age, physical activity, or activity level. In children, direct and indirect data were in good agreement. In adults, the whole body lead burden was unrelated to bone lead concentration, physical activity, or occupational status. Of the adults, 100% of those employed in an occupation known to be toxic to the kidney had a whole body lead burden of more than 100 micrograms/kg. This observation, together with the negligible organ lead burdens of 2 children with cerebral palsy, indicates that in this population of children, inadequate excretion of lead is the main cause of the toxic whole body lead burden.

Q: converting a string to bits in c++ I want to perform a simple bitwise operation using string. I know about str2bits(), but this will work only for string with length no.Of bits. For example '00101100' converts to 27 bits only '10101000' converts to 27 bits only '10101100' converts to 27 bits only but for the following string it gives error as out of bits: '10000001' not in range [0, 2147483647] My code: string str="10000001"; long x=str2bits(str); cout<n its ongoing efforts to acquire content, today Evernote released a number of updates, including completely revamped user interfaces for Android and iOS, a new web app that serves as a universal store for all your notes and notebooks, as well as improvements to the organization functionality of the Windows Phone application.
