After a careful round of testing, that included more than 300 end users, we’re proud to announce that the recently released Snow Leopard is in fact ready for enterprise and business use! If you have followed our earlier coverage, you’ll know we’ve already released a Snow Leopard Beta: Snow Leopard Beta 1 is out now! -Team Snow Leopard- There’s still a few “final” bugs to be squashed, but with the bugs that are in existence now, we are very excited to roll this out to everyone! Let us know how you like it, if you find any issues, or if there are any new features you’d like to see. And most importantly, thanks to everyone who downloaded the beta, and gave us valuable feedback. -Andy Hertzfeld TechCrunch “Snow Leopard marks the launch of Mac OS X’s formal versioning system, with a simple “Snow” name. In some ways, it’s like the “Dawn” of the Ice Cube of version number names. If you’re hoping for a lesson in developer marketing, this is the place to learn that lesson: what started as a simple “Dawn” of the Os has morphed into an entire sequence of names — Snow, Leopard, Snow Leopard, and now Snow Leopard. If, for any reason, you need to remember this sequence in order, you can hit the `i` key to add a number.” By enabling bootable discs during final testing, we were able to easily move to the public beta phase of the product. There have been a number of minor bugs that have been found and fixed. Here are the current issues we have found and fixed and we are currently aiming for final release to be on Wednesday October 12th. -Fixed an issue where the application icon sometimes did not display correctly in the dock and on the Desktop.-Fixed an issue where a few people were experiencing some slow performance.-Preference menu now shows correct colors in menus and status bar.-Fixed an issue that happened after a disk drive ejection.-Fixed a bug where the menu could be greyed out, if the computer was not connected to a power source.-Fixed an issue where the application icon was missing from the menu bar.-Corrected an issue where system locale was being set to “Chinese” for the Chinese users which is incorrect.-Preference menu now behaves correctly when set to English If you have run into any problems, let us know through any of the available methods below. b7e8fd5c8
