Do you find Windows Explorer very useful for displaying information about files that have been saved on remote computers in which you have logged on? You must know that Windows Explorer can only read data that is saved on remote computers on the active computer. You cannot set Windows Explorer to automatically discover and display files that have been saved on other computers. Windows Explorer does not allow you to configure Windows Explorer for connecting to remote network computers. Would you spy on your family? With Uneasy Watchdog all of your internet traffic is already being uploaded to the mothership where YOU can remotely control what websites your family visits." - Maker Studios Windows XP, Vista, 7, 8, 8.1, 10 It's still the early stages of this product but the team involved are working hard to get some feature rich version out there for the people. As we haven't gotten the chance to really test the product though, we can't make any claims as to how stable it is or how usable it is for people. I'm still planning on writing a review (once the bugs have been worked out!) but I haven't got any feedback from the team at the moment, it's all a bit all right at the moment. An example of how the program works: The current 'light' version of the program will let you monitor websites, select certain websites and then move them to different corners of the browser window. It'll also find the most commonly used websites on the Internet and save them into a list of favourites. You then can access them from any other browser window. The 'light' version can also be used to select popular social networks, select what photos, videos and music you want to share on those networks, and then share them to your own and other peoples' networks. You can then access the shared items from any of your windows. You can even access the content that you've shared to other people's networks from ANY SITE. The program would however be best if it could also be set up to be a proxy. That way you could lock down the websites on your windows and internet traffic from outside your house/school etc. would be filtered through your proxy. This would also allow you to access content on sites like youtube and facebook from inside your own network

Even if the Spartans aren't a traditional power in the top tier of the conference, they've been running away with it. They'd currently sit alone atop the BIG with two championships, two undefeated conference records, and a trio of unblemished all-time winning streaks. They've been on top since 2011 and have only looked stronger as their core core of last year's team has continued to mature. It's been a season of plenty for the Spartans and plenty of noise has come with their rise to the top. The Spartans have been busy behind the scenes as well, adding quality to their depth as they've seen the rise of 2016's entire roster. Their o-line has been a theme of the year as they've continued to dominate on the ground. The receivers have improved as a unit and the running backs have impressed as well, even as their star has returned. The defense has been making big strides as they look to play into the end of the year as a top ten outfit. But it's
