Calculate wie die Funktion $f(x)=x^2$ am besten algebraisch \mathbb{R} ist. I can't understand the question. Does it mean that they have a problem to calculate $f(x)$ with a polynomial or something like that? I know how to solve this. I could write $\epsilon\leq\frac{\epsilon}{x}$

In 2013, thyroid cancer is the most common endocrine malignancy and accounts for 3.8% of all new malignancies. Unfortunately, 30% of these cancers will have metastatic disease by the time of diagnosis, often to the bone, lung, and cervical lymph nodes. Identifying metastatic disease before cancer is widespread is crucial because the treatment of metastatic disease can be much different than the treatment of the primary tumor. The most common method for pre-operative evaluation of metastatic thyroid cancer is fine needle aspiration (FNA). However, there are several limitations of FNA including false negative rates up to 33%, which can lead to incorrect surgical management for the patient. Several studies have shown that pre-operative diagnostic imaging can improve specificity and sensitivity, and should be used with FNA to increase the accuracy of pre-operative thyroid cancer diagnosis. The imaging modalities include positron emission tomography 6d1f23a050
