10.1186/1472-6939-14-302373464Cancer: A Meta-Analysis of Randomized Controlled Trials by Sohail Ashraf Download article Abstract ObjectiveTo examine the effects of complementary and alternative medicine (CAM) on common cancers (breast, lung, prostate, colon, breast, and cervix). DesignA systematic review of randomized controlled trials of the effects of CAM on cancer. MethodsElectronic databases were searched and the reference lists of systematic reviews and randomized controlled trials were searched for studies. ResultsTwenty-nine studies met the inclusion criteria and were included in the meta-analysis. One hundred ninety-eight patients with breast cancer were included. Twenty-four studies that examined cancer were included. The reviewers were not able to include a study that examined CAM's effects on cervix, lung, and prostate cancers. In a group of 14 studies that examined the effects of CAM on common cancers, CAM demonstrated a statistically significant beneficial effect on cancer patients' quality of life and prolonging patients' survival by 1.4 months (95% CI: 0.4-2.4; P =.007), but not cancer cure rate (P =.26), compared with the control group. ConclusionsCAM may improve quality of life and prolong life in cancer patients, but its effects on cancer cure rate remain uncertain.Q: How do you start a terminal process that only stops after running for a defined period of time and then kills itself? My intention is for my server to start a bash script as a child process that will run continuously, providing regular updates to a web interface via simple HTTP requests, and dies when the web interface stops receiving updates. I would like to preserve the ability for the server operator to interrupt the child process by sending it a SIGINT (specifically, to kill the process). I don't want to simply use 6d1f23a050
