It has also been the practice to cause the head of a bolt to pass into a nut at a seal between the head and the nut, where the area of the head within the seal is shaped and sized to weaken the nut to separate at a predetermined torque of the nut from the bolt. Additionally, it has been the long-standing practice to provide a stop on a nut, to limit the removal of the nut from the bolt and thereby provide a predetermined upper torque value. Such a stop has been provided with a central aperture which is provided with a hardened neck that defines a stop shoulder. Source for computational models of the neuro-immune system, the development of which was begun by my Mentor and I nearly 20 years ago. Our research centers on the development, function, and role in disease of the innate immune system, primarily neutrophils and macrophages. The project has important relevance to IBD, oncology, and cystic fibrosis. It is now moving into new areas of transcriptional and post-transcriptional regulation by microRNAs. In the next year we will clone microRNAs from murine neutrophils and characterize their expression patterns during lung infection with Yersinia, during systemic inflammation, and after an Ab suppressive treatment of colitis. We have now found that the neutrophil-derived and functionally similar microRNAs miR-223 and miR c6a93da74d
