Photoshop CC 2020 reaches across disciplines thanks to additions like Adobe Lens Correction, a tool that helps you straighten and minimize distortion in your photos. Also, thanks to the AI, there's little chance you'll ever contact Photoshop by mistake. Real-time machine learning can be used to create amazing effects in post-production. Here are just some of the possibilities:

- Detecting objects in photos and videos. The software could paint attention on what's more important in a photo.
- Detecting common subjects (think: Humans). The software wouldn't store a picture of cats - or anything else - just a template which it'll recognise if it finds a cat in a frame.
- Detecting weird and wacky patterns. Potential uses are endless.
- Spotting common subjects and zoom into that subject, adding the effect of a smaller photo.

This technology also offers a number of other capabilities, including:

- Creating amazing effects in just a few frames. The AI could find patterns and automatically spruce up existing images.
- Automatically creating photo collages.
- Automatically detecting faces and objects in dramatic post-production Framing.
