TeamOS Windows 10 pro-N 10240 x86 serial activator -Smart Defrag [Softhound]1Letter: Quixotic efforts at South Norwalk high rises Editor: If you thought the bulldozers at South Norwalk High School would quiet down for the summer, you were mistaken. The school board has announced plans to demolish the high school's main structure and build a new one on the same site. This is a mammoth undertaking, to be sure, not to mention a $20 million project. Yet, as the entire area knows, the school is in need of repair. "It's a community in crisis," the Rev. Barbara Taylor was quoted as saying during the June Town Meeting, referring to the school. "It's not about money, it's about survival." This is our opportunity to help save the town. Sensible planning is our responsibility. The new high school won't solve the issue at South Norwalk High School, but it might stop the cycle of empty buildings and deteriorating conditions. For the past seven years, I've watched and marveled at the dedication of the local people when it comes to trying to help our community grow and thrive. On more than one occasion, I've learned that the fire department is raising money for a library that never had any money to begin with. Yes, there are many people who complain about town funding and small town politics, but all of them should remember the people who come to their aid when times are tough. The town of South Norwalk is a town of people helping each other. We need to continue to support the school district, for without it, nothing will change. This is a time for the leadership of the Norwalk Town Council to step up and do what's right. After Denying Suicide, His Own Bodies, His Family Hears Another Death A man whose own family announced he was dead and whose ashes were scattered on a beach for all to see has been found alive.
